

Order restored to the world; Kevin's dropping me on Kings again

It took a while, but Kevin finally had a good morning ride, which meant I was off the back more-quickly than usual.

The day started a bit oddly; Karl took off at 7:44:50, ten seconds early, and expected us to follow. Made some remark about how nobody else was coming so we might as well get going. Um... no. 7:45 means 7:45!

Warm? About 68 at the start, not bad, but hard to believe it was just over a week ago Kevin and I were wearing leg warmers! Looking forward to things cooling off a bit soon. We do make some allowances for warmer weather, stopping at the water fountain at Sky Londa (in front of the market) before heading down to West Old LaHonda.

So who rode this morning? At the start it was just a few of us, myself, Kevin, Eric & Karl. Along the way we picked up JR & Scotty.

Overall a very nice ride, and very good to see Kevin not having the issues caused by his blood pressure meds.