

Yes, we rode Sunday... even got a selfie! (See below)

One of my few selfies; that's me, over on the left. :-)

A bit late to the party here; sorry about that. It's been a pretty wild ride the last few days, with our TrekFest sale being very successful Friday, Saturday and today (Monday), keeping me on my toes without much time to take care of the basics.

But of course, it's not a question of whether there's enough time to ride. You just do. It wasn't a long ride; Kevin was having some issues with his hand, so we did West Alpine again, stopping on the way up to try and get some photos of circling vultures (that were flying just out of reach, but at least gave us an excuse for claiming we would have climbed pretty well if not for the stop).