

66 miles in 3 parts, 1st view of coast in a very long time

Poppys on lower flank of Tunitas Creek
So yes, I pushed a bit past the new 10 mile radius from home limit today, finally getting out to the coast via Old LaHonda & 84. Non-stop so no chance to infect anyone or pick up an infection, and even passed on the chance to draft a couple of guys while fighting the headwind to the coast. Let me tell you, that took some will power!

The social distancing concept still needs some work; I saw a pretty large group gathering at the base of Old LaHonda, and quite a few at the top of Kings. Until we've got this thing really under control, I don't think riding in group of more than 4 or 5 is a sensible thing to do right now. Just sends the wrong message. Never mind that I was definitely pushing the range limit myself today.

After getting home from ride #1 I went out for a "lunch" ride with my wife (she cheated with an ebike), and then after that, went back out yet again and did an out & back on Canada. More miles in one day than I've had in a very long time!