It was not what Kevin expected to see at the start of this morning's ride... it might be normal to see Kevin (pilot) show up once a week, but to add George and new-guy Don, plus a Karen sighting? That's a bit much!

Not sure If we're seeing a return to ?normal? amidst the COVID-19 bleakness or just random chance that people are re-establishing routines again.

The main takeaway for younger Kevin, something I brought up, is that older guys often ride at an easier pace just because. Which seems a bit strange to us because we only ride slow when there's no option because we're dead tired or really out of shape. Why would you ride slowly if you didn't have to?
